MISHAP AT SEA.

The Yacht Una and the Steamer Rosedale Have a Serious Collision.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 26.—The steamer Rosedale reached her dock here at 11 p. m. from her regular Sunday excursion trip to New York, her side badly battered, one of her crew dying and two passengers seriously injured. All the passengers were suffering from fright. The injured are: James Gregory, of Bridgeport, passenger, knocked senseless, exact nature and extent of injuries unknown; Patrick Ellis, of Bridgeport, passenger, badly bruised about the legs; Thomas McCarthy, fireman, skull fractured and body frightfully bruised, will probably die; unknown man supposed to have gone overboard from the yacht Una and to have drowned. The Rosedale left New York at 5 o'clock and was passing Fort Schuyler at 6:30 when suddenly there was three short schrooches of her whistle, followed by a terrible crash that caused the boat to shiver from stem to stern. At a moment the four hundred passengers were rushing about in a mad panic. Captain Wheatherwax shouted that there was no danger and caused the saloon doors to be closed, thus preventing several excited people, who had seized life preservers, from jumping overboard. Several women fainted. It was found that a large pleasure yacht had struck the steamboat and her bowsprit had torn away the planking of the Rosedale between the two decks from near the bow back to the paddle box on the starboard side, and had also torn out the pettitions of the boiler house. The bowsprit was broken off short and was brought to this city. Fireman Thomas McCarthy had just stepped to the engine room to get a breath of fresh air when the collision occurred. He was fatally injured, his forehead being broken in and his body frightfully bruised. Jas. Greggory, of this city, was setting talking with a policeman near where the bowsprit struck. He was knocked insensible and sustained injuries that are very serious. Patrick Ellis, also of this city, was bodly bruised about the legs. While Captain Weatherwax was doing his best to calm the fears of the frenzied men and women, Pilot Davis was putting about to pick up the yacht. On coming near it was seen that the occupants of the yacht had taken to small boats. The captain, who remained aboard the Una for a moment, declined all offers of aid, saying that he had now found that there was no danger of sinking. They did not wish to be brought to Bridgeport but would like to be towed to Glen Cove, where they could spend the night. Their request was granted. At this time the Rosedale people were very busy allaying the excitement of the frenzied men and women and no particulars were learned further than that the yacht's name was Una and that one of her crew who was on the bowsprit was given up as lost. Apparently she was bound for New York. All her canvass was spread. The Rosedale's passengers declare that also showed lights and was not seen, despite her expanse of white sails, till the moment of the collision.

WILL RETIRE.

John D. Rockefeller Will Leave the Standard Oil Company.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—John D. Rockefeller, the Standard oil magnate and multi-millionaire, will soon retire from all active business connected with the Standard Oil company. One reason for this is found in the fact that failing health has deprived him of the inclination to plan and execute gigantic business enterprises. Another reason is found that charitable and educational work is more to Mr. Rockefeller's taste. The retirement does not grow out of any inclination to find fault with the management of the Standard company, for the concern will remain practically in the hands of William and Frank. Mr. Rockefeller would have retired some months ago, but he was induced to remain by the repeated requests of his business associates.

THREE MEN DROWNED.

They Foolishly Attempt to Run the Rapids in a Boat.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Sept. 26.—Governor Sterger, aged twenty-two, John Schmidt, aged twenty-one, both married, and Jacob Burkley, twenty-seven, who has a wife and two children, are supposed to have been drowned while running the rapids in a boat in the Connecticut river, a few miles above Turners Falls last evening. Two others John Steiger, brother of George, and a Swiss named Havelly, refused to shoot the rapids and walked home. The others did not return this morning and a hat and their overturned boat have been found.

CHANGE OF PROPRIETORS.

Joseph R. Dunlop Retires From the Chicago Mail Publishing Company.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Mr. Joseph R. Dunlop has sold his interest in the Chicago Mail and will sever his connection with that paper today. It could not be learned to whom the sale was made. Mr. Dunlop is interested, together with eastern capitalists, in a new evening paper, which will make its appearance here in two weeks, or thirty days, at the farthest.

A ROBBERY PREVENTED.

An Armed Posse Save the Queen and Crescent Fast Train Agents.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 26.—The officials of the Queen and Crescent railroad Saturday night received information that an attempt would be made by men working in a rock quarry near Irondale to hold up and rob the night express on their road near that place. A posse of heavily armed officers was placed on the train and distributed themselves in the express and mail cars and passenger coaches. Nothing was seen of the robbers and the railway people believe the robbers learned that their plans had been betrayed.

ITALIAN MURDERED.

The Descendants of Two Old Families Renew a Feud of Two Generations.

JERSEY CITY, Sept. 25.—A feud, which arose two generations ago, in Sicily, between the Del Martio and Faustutio families, has been carried on relentlessly ever since. When Michael Faustutio sailed for this country, some time ago, he took up quarters at 497 Fourth street, Jersey City, and it seemed that his life, at least, was spared the vendetta. It was not long, however, that Joseph Del Martio also reached these shores and crossed Faustutio's path. For some months the men were drawn together by common memories, but the friendship ceased in a short time, owing to a quarrel, two weeks ago. Last night as Del Martio came out of his house he met Faustutio and several of his friends on the sidewalk. Faustutio addressed an insulting remark to him in Italian, when Del Martio drew a revolver and shot him through the heart, killing him instantly. The murderer fled while an excited crowd gathered around the fallen victim. His young widow, attracted to the scene by the commotion, grew hysterical when she saw her husband dead before her, and shrieked and called down imprecations upon the head of the murderer while she knelt beside the corpse. Del Martio, the murderer, had in the meantime been apprehended and handed over to the police. At the station he denied having a revolver, but the officer who searched him found a 38-calibre weapon in his pocket. One chamber was empty. The dead man was twenty-five years old and was married but six months.

DIPHTHERIA PREVALENT

A Reckless Undertaker Exposes the Colored Population of Washington to the Disease.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The police and health officers of the district are engaged in investigating the truth of a horrible story, told of a colored undertaker, Ernest Edwards, whose reported recklessness has caused the deaths of a number of persons from diphtheria. The story goes that on July 6, last, a colored girl named Maude Myers, died of diphtheria. Edwards was employed and prepared the body for burial. Having no funds to pay for one of the funeral, Edwards removed the body from the ice box and put it in the casket. He took the ice box, containing the ice and water out into the court and emptied it on the ground. Three colored children residing in the court, Charles Burke, Ignatius Burke and Mary Davis, ate of the ice. On July 16 the Burke and Davis children were stricken with diphtheria and died in a few hours. Dr. Warren immediately notified the health officer of the facts and Dr. Charles Oasman, inspector of contagious diseases, was sent to investigate the case. Dr. Oasman reported on the 20th there was no evidence which could be secured that would warrant a charge of violation of the health regulations, and included in his report an affidavit from Edwards in which he denies that he had deposited the ice in the alley. He also inclosed a letter of Dr. Sotheran, which certified to Edwards' truthfulness. The officers then dropped the case. Rumor, however, kept the matter alive and yesterday the health officers, spurred to renewed efforts by a newspaper reporter, looked into the case and found that several witnesses volunteered to swear that Edwards did throw the ice into alley. Since the date of Maude Myers' burial thirty-two cases of diphtheria have occurred in St. Mary's court, fifteen of which proved to be fatal. They are traceable, it is said, to the ice thrown in the alley by Edwards from offMaude Myers' coffin. A determination has been expressed by the authorities to prosecute Edwards for perjury and manslaughter is he is arrested, which up to the present time he has escaped.

LEATHER FIRM INVOLVED.

A Tannery Fire Causes a Loss They Cannot Carry.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Henry Poor & Son, leather merchants at No. 58 and 60 South street, assigned to Edward Dunn, of Dunn, Green & Co. The immediate cause of the assignment was the burning of the tannery of the firm at Winn, Maine, the latter part of August.

The liabilities amount to about $375,000; assets nearly $800,000. The feeling of the larger creditors toward the firm is very friendly, and is expected that an arrangement will be made by which the firm will soon resume business.

A Sunstroke at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 26.—Isaac Hannah, of this place, was removed to the hospital on Saturday, suffering from sunstroke. The oldest inhabitant cannot recall a parallel case at this time of the year.

BAD STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Seventy-Five Soldiers Thrown Into a Fever by an Impure Water Supply at the Post.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The garrison at Fort Myer, of Arlington Heights, opposite the city of Washington, are in a deplorable condition owing to a deficient water supply. Fort Myer has for several years past suffered from an inadequate supply of water, both as to quality and quantity, and since the number of men at the post has been increased by a whole troop of cavalry, there has been actual suffering and sickness from one year's end to the other. At the present time the sick list of the post is twice as large as should be expected, from the size of the garrison, and of these half are of the low malarial fever brought on by the small supply of bad water. Application has been made time and again for connection with the Washington supply, but, although the cost would be about $8,000 only, the plans have laid smouldering in their grave at the war department, and in the meantime the government has lost almost the cost of the proposed connection in the loss of the service of the eighty-three fever cases that have burdened the post in the past three years, to say nothing of the loss of forty lives from the fever. The water supply of the fort consists only of a spring at the foot of the hill on which the post is situated. There are here dug three wells, which in times of drought are pumped down to the very dregs each day to supply the drinking water for the post. The capacity of the three tanks in the water tower whence the water is disturbed is 40,000 gallons, and in the spring time, when the rain and melting snow kept the wells full, the daily consumption of the fort was 35,000 gallons. But for the past two weeks the daily supply has been reduced to an average of 5,000 gallons. The supply of water in the wells fills up from day to day, and when pumped dry toward evening the supply has to be cut off and these sinks allowed to fill up during the night. The necessary daily supply for the men alone, according to the statistics of the war department, should be 16,000 gallons, but now that this was been cut down to 5,000, bathing within the limits of the post has been discontinued, and the men have had to take to the river. The hospitals today contain seventy-five patients out of 100 men stationed at the post, a most astounding percentage.

NAVAL EXPENSES.

The Estimate for 1893 Have Been Placed at $19,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The annual estimates for the navy for the fiscal year 1893 have been made up and will be sent to the secretary for transmission to congress. It is understood that about $19,000,000 has been recommended for payment on account of the new navy which will come due between July 1, 1893, and June 30, 1891. No estimates are made for new ships. This is a matter to be discussed in the secretary's report. There is a considerable speculation as to what new vessels the secretary will recommend. It is believed he will ask for another battle ship and renew his recommendation for four small gunboats and several torpedo cruisers.

THEY DIDN'T PLAY.

Mayor Washburn Stops a Sunday Game of Hunting.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—The Emmets and the Innisfails of the Gaelic Athletic association, did not play hurling at Gaelic park yesterday afternoon. They were anxious to test each other's muscle, but Inspector Keech, Captain Madden, and sixty-five bluecoats were present to see that no game was played, and they bowed in submission to the authority of the law. They got together, however, and with the aid of the 1,000 persons who gathered within the park inclosure held an indignation meeting, at which Mayor Washburn was vigorously denounced for issuing the mandate against their Sunday contests.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Bullet Crashes Through a Window Near a Millionaire's Head.

EUPORIA, Ill., Sept. 26.—Frank Corning, the millionaire distiller of this city, barely escaped assassination on Saturday night. While seated in his parlor a bullet crashed through the window, barely missing his head. He has received warnings of such a fate, but had paid no attention to them.

GAMBLING DEN BURNED.

THE FLAG INSULTED.

Venezuelans Seize a United States Ship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Members of the group of the Venezuelan revolutionists in this city claim to have received private cable advices that the steamer Carenes, flying the United States flag, was boarded at La Guayara by Pulido's soldiers, who seized several passengers and the captain, whom they threatened to shoot upon interference. Several shots were fired at the flag. United States Minister Scruggs is said to have demanded the release of the passengers and a salute to the flag for the insult. Both were refused. It is also stated that Minister Scruggs is practically a prisoner and could not communicate with Washington. As the Caracas is due today the truth of the story will be ascertained.

AT REST.

The Remains of the Late General John Pope Laid in the Grave.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—The remains of Major-General John Pope, who died at Sandusky, Ohio, Friday last, reached this city on a Wabash railway train at 8 o'clock this morning. The coaches were heavily draped with mourning emblems.

The casket was placed on a cassion and lay in state at the depot until 11 o'clock in order to allow the friends of the departed general an opportunity to view the remains.

The coffin was appropriately draped with the stars and stripes and on top lay the general's sword, sword belt, epaulettes, and chapeau. At 11 o'clock the troops from Jefferson barracks drew up before the depot and the procession formed in line and soon afterward began to march to the Bellefontaine cemetery.

Following the cassion was the general's horse draped in black and led by a sergeant. The saddle was in its place with the stirrups crossed and the reversed boots of the deceased in the stirrups.

The procession marched with solemn tread to the fair grounds, where carriages and cars conveyed the cortege to the cemetery. Rev. Dr. Schuyler delivered the funeral oration at the grave, and the casket was then lowered into the earth.

Three volleys were fired over the grave as a military salute and the sorrowing relatives and friends slowly left the cemetery. It has not yet been decided whether a guard will be placed over the grave.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—A commercial traveler was found to be suffering with cholera in one of the hotels at the Hague today. He was removed to a hospital and disinfected and isolated.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 26.—There were seventeen new cases of cholera in this city on Sunday and ten deaths.

A MERCIFUL RUNAWAY.

PALMYRA, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Charles Gallagher and Miss Kate Moran were driving down hill to the crossing about a mile and a half north of this village last night, when the horse became unmanageable and dashed into the St. Louis express going east. The horse's head was caught between two cars and torn entirely from the body. Gallagher and Miss Moran were thrown against the train and dragged quite a distance.

Gallagher's skull was fractured and he will die. Miss Morton is badly bruised and her collar bone is broken.

CORY, Pa., Sept. 26.—A head end collision took place on the Pittsburg and Erie railroad at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in which Fireman William Zockman lost his life and Engineer Smith was badly injured. Train No. 52, in charge of Engineer Allen and Fireman Hutchins, had orders to pass the extra train at Lorell's Station. The extra also had orders to pass at Lorell's, but later on received orders to make the crossing at Elgin. It was running about thirty miles an hour when the collision took place. Allen and Hutchins jumped and escaped. Smith and Zockman were caught in the wreck. The latter was killed, and Smith was badly hurt about the legs and internally. Both engines and several cars were smashed. Zockman was married and leaves a family at Erie.

LUTHERANS AT WORK.

Their Meeting at Y. M. C. A. Hall a Success.

The Y. M. C. A. hall was the scene of interesting services yesterday morning and evening. By order of Synod Rev. J. N. Lenker, secretary of the board of church extension, and Rev. C. H. Rockey, of Columbia City, accompanied Rev. J. S. Nelson to Fort Wayne to assist in the development of the new organization of the General Synod Lutheran church. In the morning Rev. Lenker addressed an audience of very excellent people of this city, already interested in the work of the Lutheran church. In the evening Rev. Lenker spoke eloquently of the general character and history of the Lutheran church, its widespread and rapid growth, its doctrinal basis and aims. Although only a few weeks old, the Lutheran organization, under the supervision and tireless and efficient work of Rev. J. S. Nelson, has grown to thirty-five, and when fully organized will reach fifty. Rev. Nelson, Lenker and Rockey, together with others interested in this work here, are spending the day looking over the field, and selecting a location upon which to build a new chapel in the near future.

Services will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall each Sabbath, beginning on the 9th of October, morning and evening. Everybody will be welcomed, and every Lutheran interested in the work is expected to meet with them.

WRECK AT PERU.

A Passenger and Freight Train Collide, Injuring Several Persons.

A disastrous collision occurred on the Wabash at Peru about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Passenger train No. 41, due here at 6:20, dashed into a freight in charge of Conductor James J. Hayes, completely demolishing both engines and derailing the entire passenger train. The firemen of both trains jumped for their lives, as did also the engineer of the freight, but Engineer George Andrews, of the passenger, remained at his post and was badly injured. When found he was lying by the drivers of the passenger engine and was picked up unconscious, and was taken to the hospital at Peru, where, after some work, he was restored to consciousness and is better today. Two mail clerks were slightly injured and the passengers badly shaken up, but no one was hurt. How all the passengers escaped without injury is a miracle, as one of the passenger cars was broken squarely in two. The passenger engine is so badly damaged that it is a question whether she will be rebuilt or not and most of the freight cars were mashed to pieces. None of the freight crew were injured. Engineer Andrews came up to this city this morning and is now at his home.

LOCAL LINES.

Hon. Judge Morris left this afternoon for Logrange to try a law case.

Hon. R. C. Bell returned today to Paxton, Ill., where he is trying a heavy damage suit.

The ladies interested in the Zollinger battery kirmess will meet tonight in the dental office of Dr. Mungen.

A child was run over this afternoon by a horse, at the corner of DeWald and Lafayette streets. The little one was considerably bruised. Its name could not be learned.

Last Saturday afternoon Miss Cora Everett was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Wirick at the home of Mrs. Byer, on Barr street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. K. Zartman.

The members of the Phœnix lodge K. of P., presented a handsome appearance in the Henderson funeral procession today. They were led by the City band. The Phœnix is one of the strongest lodges in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lukens left today for their home at Battle Creek, Mich. Mr. Lukens has been in the city for several weeks superintending the erection of THE SENTINEL'S new press. He is a pleasant gentleman and made many friends here.

The statement made in THE SENTINEL a few days ago that Wm. J. Moran had committed suicide by reason of a quarrel with his brother, was obtained, it seems, from an unreliable source, and, we are glad to say, was entirely unwarranted. The relations between the brothers, we are told, have always been of the pleasantest character.

TWO ACCIDENTS.

The Electric Street Cars Have Their First Serious Mishap—A Child Badly Injured.

The first serious accidents on account of electric street cars occurred Saturday when the three year old daughter of Gottlieb Mousnest was so badly injured that her life was for a short time despaired of. The little girl was playing in the street in front of No. 55 East Wayne street, where her parents live. When the electric car was within a few yards of her she attempted to cross the street, but only succeeded in reaching the center of the track when the car struck her. She was knocked down and pushed by the guard board a few feet over the rough stone. The car then titled up sufficiently to allow the child's head to get beneath the board, when it came to a standstill. The little one was removed from beneath the car in an unconscious condition, bleeding at the mouth and ears. Dr. A. J. Boswell was called, and after an examination of the baby's injuries he summoned Drs. Myers and McLean to his assistance. The injuries are very severe, and in an older person would certainly prove fatal. The doctors found the skull fractured back of the right temple. There are also internal injuries, but time alone can tell how severe they are. The little sufferer lay two hours unconscious, and then began to cry. Dr. Boswell had the girl removed to St. Joseph's hospital, where she will be properly cared for. He says he believes the baby will recover. Gottlieb Mousnest, the father of the child, is addicted to the drink habit, and spends money for whisky which could be better applied in the support of his family.

Another street car accident was that which happened to Mrs. George Grayless Saturday afternoon in front of Holman's drug store on South Calhoun street, when the buggy in which the lady and her four-year-old daughter were seated was smashed into shitherens. Mrs. Grayless and her child were thrown to the ground in front of the electric car, but the motorman succeeded in stopping it before the unfortunate mother and daughter were injured. The front of the buggy was smashed with Mrs. Grayless and that it was not more serious is due to the presence of mind and prompt action of the motorman.

JOHN C. KENDELL.

Writes Concerning the Great G. A. R. Encampment.

1801 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Thinking that a few lines from me would not be uninteresting, I avail myself of this, the first opportunity.

"On to Washington" was the battle cry in 1861, and for the past year of 1892. No city ever saw such a grand pageant as was witnessed on Tuesday. It was indeed a grand sight to see the "old vets" swing themselves once more on Pennsylvania avenue, as many of them did in that "first grand review," when just fresh from "fields of carnage and strife," they walked as conquerors along the same thoroughfare twenty-seven years ago. There was quite a difference between "then and now," you bet! (Excuse slang).

Washington has done itself "proud," and the "old vets" were given a glorious welcome. The weather was all that could be desired on parade day. How our palace seemed to leap and thrill, as by one the old battle flags, shot-torn, bullet-riddled and faded, would pass in review. What thoughts of the past they would awaken as cheer after cheer would roll out from twice ten thousand throats, amidst the waving of flags and banners from housetops and windows all along the lines. It was, indeed, a grand sight, and it is impossible for me to attempt a description. The enthusiasm was unbounded as some of the more prominent officers would appear in line and be recognized. General Butler was in an open carriage and received a full share of honors, and so did "Old Rosy" (General Rosecrans). Being acquainted with him, I called on him and had an interview. He asked about ex-Mayor Muhler and family and wished to be remembered to them. I also called on Colonel Lawton, formerly of the old Thirtieth Indiana. He is looking well and asked about his old comrades in and around Wayne and sends kind regards. I met Skelton, Davis, Ryan, Medaker and many of our "old townies," and they were all having a good time. I visited many places, and I may, if opportunity offers, write you again. I intend to visit the battlefield of dear "Old Gettysburg," from which place I may write you. One of the most interesting places I visited was the navy yard—the dispatch boat "Dolphin" and the dynamite cruiser "Vesuvius." I went on board both of these vessels as well as the old (Guards) schoolship, Pale. I have so much that I could speak about that I fear I would weary you, but I cannot close this without speaking of our big guns that I saw them making. I will only give dimensions, and you try and comprehend the magnitude of them if you can: Forty-one feet long, 13in. bore, 65 tons weight, carries a shell whose weight is 900 pounds, backed by 520 pounds of powder, a distance of twelve miles. Every shot or discharge costs an even $1,000.

It costs money, you see, to keep the peace, and I tell you they are peace makers, indeed. But I must close. Kind wishes to all. Excuse all mistakes and bad grammar.

Respectfully,
JOHN C. KENDELL.

TAKEN TO AN ASYLUM.

Milton Webber Becomes Violently Insane—The Michael-Eckart Case—Court News.

A sad case is that of Milton Webber, the well-known accountant and saloonkeeper at the corner of Calhoun and Main streets.

Drink has made him insane, and today he is an inmate of the insane asylum at Richmond, this state, having been taken there this morning by Dr. McCalf and Thomas Maunix.

Mr. Webber had been drinking heavily, and several weeks ago was taken ill, being confined to his home for some time, during which he had to be constantly watched. A commission in lunacy was then held, and he was declared of unsound mind, but through the interposition of friends he was not sent to an asylum.

He regained his mental equilibrium a few days ago and was out on the streets, when he began drinking again. This soon upset him and Saturday night he became so violent that friends were compelled to take him in charge, and he was conveyed to the hospital ward of the jail. A commission in lunacy was held. He was adjunged insane and this morning, as stated above, was taken to Richmond.

MICHAEL-ECKART.

The slander case of Councilman Herman Michaels against Frederick Eckart, the wealthy pork packer, is still in progress at Columbia City. The testimony is interesting and sensational and it is thought will not be concluded this afternoon. The case may go to the jury tomorrow night.

When he came out, an hour later, the horse and buggy were gone. later he found the horse at the bus barn. He thought it had been stolen, but it had broken loose from the hitching post and had been taken care of by employes of the bus barn.

There were four drunks in police court this morning. One of them was a one-legged soldier and he was let go. The other three were sent to jail.

Chas. McNally is in jail for stealing a watch. He will have his trial before Justice Ryan. Officer Dasher made the arrest.

Jury Commissioners Wilson and Hand have drawn a struck jury to try the damage case of John McCaffrey, by his friend, Thomas McCaffrey, against the Pennsylvania company. Cook, Washington; Frank Emmerson, city; Nathan Glazier, Perry; Jerome Gloyd, Perry; Nathan A. Johnson, Eel River; William E. Mossman, city; Daniel Notestine, Cedar Creek; J. W. Pearse, city; John Runnels, Perry; Aug. Schiele, city; Amasa Shaffer, Milan; Caleb Townsend, Jefferson; Christ Wenningloff, city.

Col. Charles Whitney was a pleasant caller at THE SENTINEL office this afternoon. The colonel is quite an old time friend and frequent visitor at this place, being then the advance agent for Forepaugh's circus. When Adam Forepaugh died Colonel Whitney retired from the road, expecting to spend the remainder of his life in quiet, but the habits of early life are hard to change, and after a years idleness he tired of doing nothing and again took the road, this time in the interest of a theatrical troupe. He is here today to superintend the rebilling of "A Railroad Ticket," a comedy-drama which will be produced at the Temple tomorrow evening, and which, by the way, has no superior, judging from the complimentary notices it has received in the St. Louis and Chicago papers. "A Railroad Ticket" was written by Messrs. C. F. Blaney and Joseph Gates, the former a ticket broker of Columbus, Ohio, and is replete with amusing incidents. Colonel Whitney was the first to leave a dream advertisement in THE SENTINEL office after its removal to its present quarters. He says Fort Wayne has grown wonderfully since his last visit here.

A PIONEER GONE.

Mrs. Randall Died at Her Son's Home in Avilla—Demise of Conductor Harber—Other Deaths.

Mrs. Mary A. Randall died at the home of her son, S. K. Randall, in Avilla, Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, at the age of sixty-eight years. The deceased was the widow of Edwin Randall, one of the most prominent settlers of Noble county, who died in 1873, and was the mother of Perry A. Randall and Mrs. George W. Searey, of this city, and S. K. Randall, of Avilla. She had resided in Noble county fifty-five years and was one of the most highly esteemed residents of that county. Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Randall divided her time between her children. A few weeks ago she was stopping with Mrs. Searey. Shortly after leaving this city for Avilla she was taken ill and gradually grew worse until death terminated her earthly career. In her girlhood Mrs. Randall attended school in this city and many of our old citizens were her schoolmates and remember her well. The funeral occurred at Avilla at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon and was attended by a number of Fort Wayne relatives and friends.

The remains of the late Mrs. Harriet Taylor were buried this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the funeral services being held at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Louis Mohr, at No. 19 West Wayne Wayne street.

The funeral of the late Arthur Henderson occurred at 2 o'clock this afternoon, the services being conducted under the auspices of Phœnix lodge, K. of P., of which order the deceased was a member. The lodge members turned out almost to a man.

Conductor Henry Harber died Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, aged twenty-six years. The deceased was injured while coupling cars at Bellevue, Ohio, a few weeks ago. The injures were not considered dangerous, though the unfortunate man was badly squeezed between the bumpers. Blood poison set in, however, and the young man grew worse steadily until death claimed him at the hour mentioned above. The deceased was employed on the Nickel Plate several years, first as a brakeman and later as a freight conductor. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and his funeral will be under the auspices of that order. The funeral will take place Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from the house, and at 9:30 from St. Peter's Catholic church.

Bertha, the months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lehker was buried at 2:30 o'clock yesterday, the funeral being from the residence, No. 19 Marion street. Rev. Lindeman officiated.

Mrs. Julia Begley was buried at the Catholic cemetery yesterday afternoon. The remains were taken from the St. Joseph hospital at 1 o'clock to the Cathedral, where the funeral services were held.

Lucy M., the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Witte, died this morning of diphtheria. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning from the residence, 49 Locust street, and will be private.

Early this morning Miss Clara, aged four months and eighteen days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schwartze, died of diphtheria at the home of her parents. Funeral tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

This morning, at her residence, 149 Fairfield avenue, occurred the death from exhaustion of Mrs. Agnes McKeag, widow of the late William McKeag. She was a native of Scotland, but spent the greater part of her life in the land of her adoption. She leaves a family of two daughters, Miss Ellen, a teacher in the high school, and Miss Agnes. She was a sister of Mrs. H. Newell. She will be sadly missed in the family circle. The funeral will occur Wednesday afternoon, at 2:30, from the house. Rev. Beggs will officiate. The deceased was fifty-seven years, eleven months old.

At 9 o'clock this morning, Erwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Menze, of 338 East Washington street, died at the age of ten months and ten days, of marasmus. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon from the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Haskers, of 154 Greeley street, very elegantly entertained friends last evening. Music and cards were the diversions of the occasion. Lunch was served at 10 o'clock. Those present were the Misses Nettie and Lotta Eldridge, Nettie Rice, Carrie Sargent, Messrs. Clem Rupple, Charles Rees, William Jackson, Thos. Ryan, George Myers and George Berthaway.

The marriage of Miss Jennie McKay, of West Jefferson street, to Rev. Ball, a prominent Baptist minister of Michigan, has been announced to occur on the 29th day of October. This will no doubt be a great surprise to the many friends of Miss McKay.

LODGES—Phœnix Lodge, K. of P.

Cool nights and sunshiny days is now the program for the weather.

Jesse Hixon addressed a democratic meeting at Monroeville Saturday night.

The tariff is the great question before the people in the present political campaign.

The heavy rain of yesterday did much to remove the filth from the streets and alleys of the city.

The Sunday picnic flourishes in Fort Wayne. The rain, however, put a damper on it yesterday afternoon.

County fairs are in progress in many Indiana towns. In Fort Wayne the agricultural fair is a thing of the past.

There was a democratic rally at Sheldon Saturday. S. M. Foster spoke in the afternoon and in the evening the crowd was addressed by J. M. Robinson, B. F. Goodrich, Ochmig Bird and E. V. Emerick.

The announcement of the death of General John Pope will revive in the minds of many old soldiers the recollections of their first days of soldiering in the west. He was the first major general who was seen by several thousand of them.

Col. Patrick S. Gilmore, the celebrated bandmaster, who has appeared at the Masonic Temple in this city, died at Saint Boniface, in St. Paul, Saturday, after an illness of only one day. Colonel Gilmore was born in Dublin, Ireland, December 28, 1829, and was consequently in the sixty-third year of his age. From infancy he betrayed a musical disposition, and while attending school was connected with various bands of the regiments garrisoned in his native city. At the age of fifteen years he left school to become a member of a military band and with it came to Canada. His term of service expiring before the return of the band to Europe, he came to the United States and secured a position as leader and instructor of a brass band at Salem, Mass. He remained there but a short time when he removed to Boston and organized the original "Gilmore's band," with which he made an extensive tour of the country, which resulted in making the name of the organization a household word and synonymous with the term "good music."

Carl Schurz, the distinguished German, speaking of ex-President Cleveland, says: "I cordially do not pretend that Mr. Cleveland is the ideal man or the greatest statesman of all times. He no doubt has his limitations, weaknesses and shortcomings. But he possesses in uncommon measure the qualities which are especially desirable in a public servant, charged with great responsibilities. He has a conscience. He has a will. He has a patriotic heart. He has a clear head. He has a strong sense of right. He has a good knowledge of affairs. He is a party man, but not a party slave. He is true to duty regardless of personal interest. This is not only the judgment of his friends, but also of his opponents, who in a campaign like this they might not have to admit it. There is today no public man in America so widely known and so generally and sincerely respected as Mr. Cleveland is. Even those politicians of his own party who opposed his nomination had to respect him for those very qualities on account of which some of those thought him objectionable as a president."

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

"Low Tariff" Strikes "Three Stars" a Telling Blow.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 26.

Editor Sentinel:

Allow me to congratulate Mr. Three Stars upon his rapid improvement under tuition. I reproved him for attempting to show that Judge Cooley does not hold a certain opinion by quoting Judge Story, and he straightway abandons that line of argument. I hinted that he is too long, and he at once becomes briefer. But yesterday he was sure I had never read anything of any consequence, and today he is convinced that I have read Judge Cooley. Then he thought me "pretentious" and simple; now he pronounces no "modest" and "witty." He still, however, is skeptical of my "capacity" and "fairness." He defeated and here I might leave him: "Safe in a ditch he bides, with twenty trenched gashes on his head." But allow me a few closing observations.

In his first letter Mr. Three Stars said: "In the first place it is absurd to argue that the supreme court of the United States, in the case in Wallace, referred to by 'low Tariff' meant to say or infer that the federal constitution does not give congress the power to levy duties for protective purposes, whether these purposes are connected with raising revenue or not. A lawyer who would quote the case in support of such a proposition would make himself ridiculous." Would he, indeed? Within the last year there were pending in the supreme court of the United States three cases, viz: Boyd, Sutton & Co., Herrman, Sternback & Co. and Marshall, Field & Co. vs. the United States. The purpose of these cases was to test the constitutionality of the Mc Kinley bill.

The attorneys for the plaintiffs actually did have the audacity to contend that the decision of the supreme court in the Topeka case, 20 Wallace, condemned in principle the sugar bounty clause of said bill. Solicitor General Taft, in his argument of the case, contends that "the principle of a protective tariff necessarily justifies bounties for in the beginning of the operation of a protective tariff the amount of duty levied is a bounty to the domestic manufacturer, and it is with a view to such a benefit for him that it is levied." Bounties and a protective tariff, he said, must stand or fall together. In the opinion of Solicitor General Taft, then, the able counsel of these great firms contended that the decisions in the Topeka case condemned in principle a protective tariff. That he did not think the contention ridiculous is proved by the able argument he makes against it. The plaintiffs lost their cases, but the grounds upon which they rested them forbid the conclusion that the decision in these cases indicates what would be the decision of the court if a case could be brought before it involving nothing else than the constitutional right of congress to levy a prohibitory duty simply to benefit some home manufacturer. Such a case is hardly possible.

And so it is with all the passages and cases cited by me. They seem plainly to condemn in principle a tax levied to build up private enterprises at the expense of the public, no matter by what power laid nor under what pretense. I have nowhere attempted to argue the constitutional question involved. I have simply undertaken to affirm that there is a body of able opinion against the constitutionality of such taxes, sufficiently respectable to make it ridiculous to class those who so hold as "nullifiers" and "confederates."

No one unless he is "an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb" will so class them. If Mr. Three Stars had seen fit to print Judge Story's presentation of the arguments in support of the view opposed to the one which he himself adopts his readers might have thought those arguments stronger than Judge Story's own. The question of the constitutionality of protective taxes has never been decided. It is an open question. Opinion is divided upon it. Neither is there any unanimity of opinion as to under what clause of the constitution congress may levy such taxes may most reasonably be claimed. Solicitor-General Taft, in the cases mentioned before, declares what his opinion is. He was at that time one of the high law officers of the present republican administration. He has been recently appointed judge in a federal court of the United States; and he declares in plain words that all protective tariffs rest upon the "general welfare" clause of the constitution. It would be interesting to know how Mr. Three Stars would defend the sugar bounties under the power to regulate commerce. That a law claiming in its title to be a tax law can stalk behind the "to regulate commerce" clause is a record reserved with Mr. Three Stars. When he thinks of bounties he will sigh for his old position.

Now, as to Mr. Three Stars' second utterance. His quotation from Cooley's taxation down to "I" has no relevancy. No one will deny that the principles therein stated may properly be invoked for stimulation to the taxing power. In his "I" he says: "But a law which, under the name of taxation, has for its purpose only to embarrass and, perhaps, to destroy a certain branch of commerce, if enacted by the general government, would seem more properly to derive its force from the authority conferred upon the government to regulate commerce." Just so, more properly than from an authority which does not exist at all. But the question is, does Judge Cooley think that congress can justly claim such a power under any authority conferred upon it by the constitution. Evidently not, for in general Principles, page 57, he says: "A tax on exports, therefore, the purpose of which is not to raise revenue, but to discourage and to indirectly prohibit some particular import for the benefit of some home manufacturer, may well be questioned as being merely colorable and, therefore, not warranted by constitutional principles." Again we ask, if a law seeking, under the name of taxation, to prohibit imports is not warranted by constitional principles, by what constitutional principles is it warranted? In his first letter Three Stars quoted a sentence from Cooley's General Principles to this effect: "And perhaps even prohibitory duties may be defended as a regulation of commercial intercourse." "Perhaps" here, and "may well be questioned" in the passage I have quoted both express doubt. Judge Cooley is a better commentator on Judge Cooley than Mr. Three Stars is.

The truth is that the recent utterances of courts and of legal writers seem often, when discussing governmental powers, to choose words expressly designed to describe the principle, the operation, and effect of a protective tariff, and then to denounce them all in vigorous terms. Thus they are able to condemn in principle an abuse which they are powerless, judicially, to remedy.

One more quotation from Judge Cooley and I leave this subject. In "Taxation," page 173, he says: "It seems scarcely necessary to say that the rule of equality in taxation will forbid the power being employed for the purpose of building up monopolies. That it has sometimes been so employed, especially in the arrangements of customs duties, is unquestionable; always, of course, under the pretense of an apportionment of taxes for the public good."

"Lay it to thy heart," my dear Mr. Three Stars, "and farewell."

Low Tariff.

SHOCKNEY VS. CHASE.

A Republican Institution Charged with Extravagance by a Republican Candidate.

Theodore Shockney, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, is in hard lines. His discovery in denouncing the tax law, for which he voted, has been strongly exposed in all parts of the state. This was unfortunate for Shockney and his state organ, the Indianapolis Journal. But Shockney in his reckless charges against the Democratic party made a blunder which compromises Governor Chase. Parson Chase in his serious eulogies the feeble minded institution at Fort Wayne, and the whole Republican ticket has been denouncing that institution for extravagance and expenditures. He has been charging that the management has bought expensive Turkish rugs and many other unnecessary furnishings of foreign make. This may all be, and doubtless is true, but this is the only institution in the state that has a Republican majority on its board, and the superintendent is the only Republican superintendent of any state institution. The Republican candidate for governor and lieutenant governor ran out of time and should hold a convention and harmonize. Perhaps Candidate Shockney can easily convince Candidate Chase that it is his duty to denounce the extravagance of the Republican managers and superintendents of the feeble minded institution. Until this is done Parson Chase's sermons and Shockney's stump speeches will not consist, and one or the other should be permanently retired.

Partisan Courts in Indiana.

For seventeen years the supreme court was composed of judges elected on the democratic ticket, or at least a majority of them were. This was the complexion of the Indiana supreme court until 1888, when the Dudley "blocks of five" revolution installed three practical politicians on the supreme bench. Until then, the people, irrespective of party, had the highest confidence in the supreme court of the state. Not a word had ever been uttered, charging it with partisanship. There can not be no one decision cited where a political party was favored; no case involving questions affecting either political party was ever decided from a party standpoint. It will be remembered that the infamous Republican gerrymander of '72, remained on the statute books until '79. During that period of supreme judges were Democrats, yet no attempt was ever made to have the apportionment act of '72 declared unconstitutional by the Democrats. No caucuses were ever held by the chairman of the Democratic state committee and members of the supreme court.

In 1886 when the Democrats and Republicans were in a deadlock in the legislature, on account of the controversy as to who should preside over the senate, Colonel Gilmore, Democrat, or Senator Smith, Democrat, the supreme court composed of four Democrats and one Republican, properly declined to interfere, by deciding that the question was one for the legislature to settle. But in view of the past record of the present supreme court, is there a man who will believe in plain words that all protective tariffs rest upon the "general welfare" clause of the constitution. It would be interesting to know how Mr. Three Stars would defend the sugar bounties under the power to regulate commerce. That a law claiming in its title to be a tax law can skulk behind the "to regulate commerce" clause is a record reserved with Mr. Three Stars. When he thinks of bounties he will sigh for his old position.

Now, as to Mr. Three Stars' second utterance. His quotation from Cooley's taxation down to "I" has no relevancy.

No one will deny that the principles therein stated may properly be invoked for stimulation to the taxing power. In his "I" he says: "But a law which, under the name of taxation, has for its purpose only to embarrass and, perhaps, to destroy a certain branch of commerce, if enacted by the general government, would seem more properly to derive its force from the authority conferred upon the government to regulate commerce." Just so, more properly than from an authority which does not exist at all. Again we ask, if a law seeking, under the name of taxation, to prohibit imports is not

CONSPIRATORS ON THE RUN.

The Organs of the People's Party on Partisan Courts—Additional Charges Made Against the Revolutionists.

The American Non-Conformist has struck another heavy blow at the Republican conspiracy to revolutionize the government through a partisan court. After paying Judge Elliott a glowing tribute for his manly patriotism and The Non-Conformist castigates the other judges severely for having done what lies never been done before—excused their conduct through interested partisan newspaper. The Indianapolis Journal. The Indianapolis News, owned in part by C. W. Fairbanks, the millionaire Republican candidate for United States senator, at first tried to ridicule the charges of The Non-Conformist by asserting that it was an obscure sheet, but when it was proven that The Non-Conformist circulation was double that of The News, the Republican began to realize that something should be done to meet the arguments of the People's party organ, and the state committee ordered the interviews with the judges of the supreme court to be published in The Journal. Judge Elliott maintained his reputation by declining to be interviewed.

"Who Excuseth Himself, Accuseth Himself."

The Non-Conformist continues: A celebrated English judge once excused of questionable conduct and the attacks became so general that he was finally induced to "make a statement" in his defense, something like our modern interview. Commenting on this another famous English judge, noted for his integrity, remarked: "A judge who excuseth himself, accuseth himself." That observation fits this case exactly. The judges who attempt to excuse themselves through the columns of a partisan sheet, really accuse themselves. Their integrity was assaulted in such a way as to be deemed worthy of notice, they should have noticed it in a far different way. They should have proceeded as judges, by summoning the accusers before them to answer for contempt of court. The law provides their remedy as well as their vindication, and the former is as summary as the latter is complete.

Several Rotten Eggs in the Bowl.

The Non-Conformist therefore takes great pleasure in acquitting Judge Elliott. It is really unnecessary to state to those who know him that he is incapable of a dishonorable action. If all the members of the state court were equally conscious of the honor that befits a judge, this discussion would not be in progress. Coming back to the point of the controversy. The Non-Conformist avers that several of the judges, whose denials are so loudly published, are guilty as charged in the original interview, which now rests. Among the number was Chairman Gowdy, of the Republican state central committee. The members of the committee were not present. The meeting did not take place in the regular committee room. It was attended only by choice spirits of the Republican party—members of the "inner circle," as it were. Even the United States court was represented by a distinguished member. We derive our information from one who was present at the meeting. If this is not sufficiently specific, we will try to make it more so. The Journal will be satisfied that the charge is not "obscure," even if it thinks the source from which it emanates is of that character.

Muddy and Others.

Judge Olds, in an interview quoted above, is not content with giving the supreme court a Dill finish. He goes out of the way to whitewash the iniquitous judges also, stating that his familiarity with the Indiana judiciary qualifies him to pronounce it pure and above reproach. This is a somewhat startling statement in view of the recent occurrences, but especially with details of the present controversy staring the public in the face. Does Judge Olds regard the method of bringing the gerrymander suit a proper and dignified proceeding? Does Judge Gowdy appear to him as such a model of a mist-prius judge as to justify his sweeping eulogy? If so, we are astonished. He must be his ideal is not high nor his conclusions such as can generally be accepted. The case before Bundy, though one of the most important cases of the state and the most vital consequences to the whole people, was partisan in its inception and for all its progress so far, and if pressed to its logical termination must be partisan in its influence and effect. All the papers in the case were prepared here in Indianapolis, with a typewriter. This indicates that even the order of the court for an alternative writ of mandate. All the judge had to do was to sign it. Then was to sign his name. Then was, indeed, a sham show made of having the case heard—represented by counsel. The went to the appointment of a lawyer to appear for the defense. And whom, will you suppose was appointed for the duty? None other than ex-Judge Mellett, who is the father-in-law of Judge Bundy, Bundy's former business partner at the same table. The extent of his duties, as appears from the record, consisted in filing a demurrer to answer, the complaint which in due time his son-in-law will proceed to overrule. The case therefore stands ready to be brought in the interests of the Republican party, before a Republican judge, Republican jurors, sitting in a sham Republican defense. Everything in and about the case smells of partisanship, and a verdict for the state guaranteed. The pleadings were not only cut-and-dried, but the decision was ready-made. The time of the filing of the papers in the final judgment was agreed on in advance. This judge, like a "swift witness," knew before-hand how he was going to say. He had been "seen" as well as coached. Last week one of the lawyers for the defense was engaged expressing his disgust and disappointment because Bundy had not sent him his decision as promised. He explained that the arrangement was that it should be here before the supreme court adjourned, so that all the republican members of the court might be taken. But the gang was somewhat abashed, not to say frightened, at the storm raised by their proceedings. Bundy hesitated and failed to come to time. The supreme court has adjourned and is without hope of having a chance to act on Bundy's cookoo-up record. What will be the result of the hesitancy of the gang of conspirators may go to the extent of summoning a special session. This, however, is not likely and after reconsidering the time for effective action will be had. The "obscure" exposure of The Non-Conformist grated harshly upon the crowd and seems to have sadly "obstructed the course of justice" from a Republican standpoint. The people are now watching matters so closely that no more can be taken without sharp scrutiny and stinging criticism. The whole thing game has been flushed before the hunter was ready. Perhaps the great gerrymander case will prove a case of premature accouchment, necessitating a certificate from the political doctors of "stillborning." To still quote medical language, if it turns out to be an instance of "threes" presenting at the head, as in the first time that partisan tricksters have appeared before the public wrongly and forcenot.

Who Pays the Sugar Bounty?

The bounty paid to the Louisiana sugar growers by the government last year exceeded $10,000,000. That is a tax of sixteen cents for each man, woman and child in the United States, or $350,781.64 for Indiana.

The estimate for the coming year exceeds over $15,000,000, and the Louisiana papers have boasted that within five years the sugar growers would receive in bounty from the government over $20,000,000 annually.

Knowing the Democrats would repeal this bounty, if ever returned to power in every branch of the government, or refuse to appropriate money to carry out this provision, if they ever secured the house, the billion-dollar congress made a continuous appropriation until July, 1905, to pay this bounty. The people will have to pay this bounty as long as the Republicans continue in power. But this is not all. The wealthy sugar growers of Louisiana have been led to believe that the government owed them this bounty, and they threaten to sue the government, through the court of claims, for the recovery of damages, should Cleveland be elected, and the bounty law of the McKinley tariff repealed, claiming that the government entered into a contract with them to pay them a bounty of two cents per pound, for fourteen years.

The Sugar Bowl and Farm Journal, the organ of the sugar growers, published in New Orleans, in its edition of July 16, boldly asserts this proposition as follows:

We fully agree in all our St. Mary correspondent says below, except the last sentence, part. The Sugar Bowl has all along maintained that the bounty law is a settlement of the sugar question for fourteen years, in fact, a CONTRACT, and we have simply to so contend and it will never be repealed. Our people have for so many years had their fears wrought upon by the annual agitation of the sugar question that they have continued to feel insecure. When that law passed, settling the question for fourteen years, they felt that it was too good to be true, and that there surely was no more than had been the duty. Hence, as it is a contract, under faith of which millions of dollars of property are committed to it, and even though the Democratic nominee for president, with free trade ideas, should be elected, the senate is Republican and will remain so for more than four years to come, and they will not favor its repeal.

Shall He Be a Millionaire?

For the first time in the history of Indiana, the people are threatened with the possibility of being represented in the United States senate by a millionaire.

Indiana can boast of the proud distinction of being the only northern state that never has been represented in the United States senate by a millionaire. If the Republicans carry the legislature who will boast no more for the man who makes a profession of betting on elections, can safely offer to bet that if the Republicans carry the next legislature, Charles W. Fairbanks, the millionaire railroad lawyer and speculator of Indianapolis, will succeed Senator Turpie in the United States senate. Mr. Fairbanks is reported to be the richest man in the state, wealth acquired within the short period of twelve years by speculating on Wall street. And strange to say, he relies upon the farmers to elevate him to the millionaires' club—the United States senate. He knows that the People's party will draw from the Democratic party three votes to one from the Republican party and thereby allow the Republicans to carry the state. Mr. Fairbanks owns a railroad and is largely interested in others. He owns the Indianapolis News which is now engaged in bulldozing the supreme court into revolutionizing the state government by declaring the apportionment unconstitutional. He is a stockholder in the Elwood tin plate works which has been built by taxing 63,000,000 consumers. He is interested in other corporations and is a corporation man throughout. His only hope of success is through Democrats who vote the People's party ticket. A vote for the People's party candidate for the legislature is equal to half a vote for Millionaire Fairbanks for the United States senate.

Simple Method of Removing Wrinkles.

It is easier to remove wrinkles than to eradicate any other defect of the face, and yet we daily see many faces, otherwise beautiful, rendered unnecessarily old by that shrinkage of the tissue we call wrinkles. A simple, but positive, treatment is Hagan's Magnolia Cream, which not only disperses wrinkles speedily but also removes pimples, blotches, eruptions, and lends an elusive glow and transparency to the complexion. PROTECTION PARADOXES.

That taxing an article makes it cheaper.

That untaxing foreigners only is "reciprocity."

That removing the tax off sugar reduced the price to the consumer.

That the older the infant industries grow the more protection they need.

That the price of tinware has been lowered, by increasing the tax on tin plate.

That making an article cheaper enables its manufacturer to pay higher wages.

That taxing raw material cheapens cost to manufacturers and lowers prices to consumers.

That the price of farm produce has gone up under McKinleyism while the cost of living has gone down.

That a party having more that 6,000,000 voters, nine-tenths of whom are workingmen, is an "enemy of labor."

That a tariff paying $175,000,000 a year into the public treasury does not increase the prices of the things taxed to produce this sum.

The high tariffs make the high wages in the United States, but leave wages in every protectionist country in Europe lower than free trade England.

That our manufacturers produce staple articles more cheaply than they can be made abroad, but that we need a high tariff to enable them to do it.

That foreigners pay the duties, and so largely support our government, but that out of mercy to them the Republican congress spent only $1,000,000,000.

That the protected manufacturers pay large sums into the Republican campaign fund, and maintain lobby agents and subsidized newspapers to defend high duties, solely to raise wages in the United States.

James Griffith, carpenter at Rhinesmith and Simonson's, has resigned his position and will accept a situation with his brother, an architect of this city.

Fort Wayne trainmen sympathize with the bereaved relatives of the late Conductor Henry Harber, whose untimely death is noted in another column.

S. S. Kelker and B. F. Humpsher, engineers on the Pittsburg, have returned from the G. A. R. encampment at Washington, D. C., and report having had a fine time.

Joe Michaels, of the Murray shops, will soon go into the chicken raising business. Joe says he is going to make a specialty of fighting cocks and democratic roosters for campaign purposes, and that he would like to have the patronage of all his friends. Give him a call.

Five of the new engines of the Nickel Plate have arrived from the Baldwin locomotive works, all of which are to be used on the eastern division from Bellevue to Cleveland. Some of the older engines on that division will be transferred to the western division. Of these, Nos. 98 and 3 have already arrived.

Orders for washing machines are being received by the Anthony Wayne Manufacturing company at a rate that is highly gratifying to the management. Twenty car-loads of the machines are now wanted in various parts of the country, and the factory force is having all it can do to keep pace with the orders.

This afternoon the grievance committee of the telegraph operators employed on the Missouri Pacific railroad will call upon Chas. W. Hannaford, of St. Louis, superintendent of telegraph, and demand an answer to their complaints, which were submitted last week. If the telegraphers are not granted the concessions which they asked in the matter of pay and hours and certain rules regulating their work they will walk out. It is believed, however, that the company will grant the major portion of the concessions asked and the matter will be amicably adjusted.

Murphy O'Hea suggests that there should be apartments set aside at St. Joseph hospital for sick or injured railway men. His idea is to devote one of the large rooms in the new addition to this purpose, to place in it a number of beds and have at the disposal of the inmates plenty of writing material, papers and books. Mr. O'Hea thinks the sisters would gladly make such arrangements if the railway men would contribute something towards the support of the department, and adds that a contribution from each trainman of five or ten cents a week, in addition to the amount paid by the railway companies, would be sufficient to defray all expenses. This is a bright idea and should certainly be considered by all trainmen. We hope to have something further to say on the subject later.

Last Saturday, Mrs. John Welch, wife of John Welch, boilermaker at the Nickel Plate round house, was thrown violently from her buggy on Wells street. The horse had become frightened at an electric car and upset the buggy. Though very badly bruised, her wounds are not of a serious nature, and it will be but a few days before she will be able to be out again.

AFTER SIMPSON'S JOB.

Chester I. Long, Who Wishes to Go to the National Congress.

Party wickstuales in the State of Kansas have brought to the surface a number of new men; fresh, vigorous workers, whose names are destined to become closely identified with national politics. Conspicuous among these number is Chester I. Long, whom the Republicans have recently nominated for Congress in the Seventh Kansas district, now represented by the soothless carlo, Jerry Simpson. Mr. Long is but 32 years of age, a Pennsylvanian by birth, and a self-made man. From the age of nineteen years his chances for the education were extremely meager, but he had acquired the rudiments and in 1870 he went to Lawrence, Kansas, where by working at odd jobs and teaching, he obtained for himself that thorough training that stands him so well in hand to-day. Deciding upon the law as his profession, he soured up his earnings, and after a due course of study was admitted to the bar in 1885. He rapidly became successful, taking front rank among the attorneys in his section of the State. Having a genius for politics, he early participated actively in the local campaigns and in 1890, his friends, recognizing his ability, nominated him for the State Senate, and he was elected by a good majority. His career as a legislator was in every way honorable. It is believed that his nomination for Congress in the Seventh district will result in that district again being wheeled into the Republican column.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER.

If the Pansy, Why Not Have It in the National Flag?

Every one loves the pansy, and in recent discussions as to the adoption of a national flower by the United States the pansy's friends were numerous. To make it the national floral emblem is the object of the Pansy Society of America, and the organization further proposes that the flower shall be established officially in the United States flag as one outlining for the stars, with the center representing the capital or central government. The national motto proposed is "Union, Culture and Peace."

The Pansy society, whose president is A. C. Hopkins, of Nashua, Iowa, and whose secretary is Maud Russell, of Canton, S. D., invites all American citizens to become members. Especially does it address itself to the children. The adoption of a button in the shape of a pansy is suggested, as well as of a pansy liberty cap. It is desired that as much as possible be accomplished during the period of the fair. Of course the society has plenty of reasons for preferring the pansy as the nation's flower, and these are set forth in an address to the school children of the country, in which they are told that if they make the effort they can secure not only the adoption of the pansy flag, but the erection by the government and the city of Chicago of a permanent and beautiful structure at the world's fair to commemorate the event.

Taken from Mount Vernon.

There is said to be an oak in the Imperial gardens at St. Petersburg which has grown from an acorn taken from a tree growing near the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon. It was planted fifty years ago by George Sumner, of Boston, the brother of Charles Sumner.

Petroleum in Peru.

So great has been the development of the petroleum fields in Peru that pipe lines have been run from the main wells to the coast. The opinion is expressed that the Peruvian field will soon be able to supply the demand of all the west coast of South America.

WOUNDS WITHOUT HURTING.

A Humane Bullet Invented by General Tweedie—How it Works.

General Tweedie has designed a bullet which is thought highly of by English ordnance experts and is in their opinion, something that will meet a long-felt want. The new small-bore bullet has been found to pass through living animals in loss sensitive parts without their being aware that they have been struck at all. This is due to the combination of high velocity and small diameter that the object is to disable man, and this is often more effectually fulfilled by wounding than by killing, because a wounded man at the moment requires one or two men to look after him, while the dead man is for the time let alone. If the wound, however is one that hardly makes its existence known, the immediate object may not be answered. A savage especially would despise a wound of this character. The bullet strikes bone the effect is different. Large bone splinters terribly under a blow at a high velocity, but the New York Times says that for want we called flesh wounds the small bore is "unwhore."

General Tweedie's bullet has a canister or case, which is closed at the base and open at the head, the canister ending about half way between the shoulder and the point. The result is that on striking the head spreads or "mushrooms" so as to make the bullet after having the advantage of a small diameter in flight to become on impact practically one of large bore. The main difference being that the energy consists more in velocity and less in weight than was the case in the old large bore ball.

It is also said to be much more efficient against thin iron or steel plate, for the same reason—namely, that it makes a much larger hole and is not particularly well in oblique impact. Of course it will be clearly understood that this is only in cases in which the plate is outmatched by the bullet.

As the chief objection to the bullet is that it will not do the work of an armor-piercing projectile, that objection can stand, says a prominent ordnance authority, and as the Tweedie bullet possesses all of the qualities required, it seems very probable that extensive experiments will be made to prove its superiority to other small-arm bullets in use to-day.

THE EAGLE AS A SYMBOL.

Continuance of the Emblem Since the Days of Rome.

The history of that bird as the symbol of the Roman Empire, and of other powers claiming succession to the same, is here pretty fully stated. Eagles there were still the ensigns of Austria, Russia and Germany, besides others pertaining to minor principalities, says the Westminster Review.

Also in the Hapsburg line the following to the restoration of the Western Empire during the rule of the Byzantine Cæsars, the world has never since [the time of Augustus] had without one or two emperors of the Romans. The present Austrian emperor, though holding scarcely a province of Adrian's, is the legal successor of Charlemagne, who was crowned in Rome emperor of the Romans, the sixty-ninth from Augustus."

The czar of Russia bears the double-headed eagle which was assumed by the Grand Duke Ivan Wasilowitz, who in 1472 married Sophia, daughter of Thomas Paleologus, and niece of the last Emperor of Byzantium, Constantine XIV.

The German emperor reigns over some Roman provinces and bears a double-headed eagle with the crown of Charlemagne. The single-headed eagle, assumed with the imperial title by the first Napoleon Bonaparte, sets forth the union of the whole Roman empire as the traditional aim of his family.

All this strikingly harmonizes with the admitted fact of the continuance of the empire, though in a divided state, of the Roman Empire, and suggests thoughts as to what may be the ultimate meaning of the words, "Wheresoever the body is there will the eagles be gathered together."

Indian Gold Work.

The filigree artists of India still continue making the round platted gold chains for which their ancestors have been so famous. From some of these chains hang ornaments of finest wire almost like gold threads, having minute fishes and other pendants dropping from them. In the English and Indian collections of jewelry, still guarded as treasure gems, one may see earrings so dexterously wrought that from connecting pendans chains they birds covered with enamel "droop with shimmering beauty."

Men Carried Fans.

Fans in Shakespeare's time seem to have been composed of ostrich and other feathers fastened to handles. Gentlemen carried fans in those days, and in one of the later figures of the German thing they are represented as using to an old manuscript in the Ashmolean museum. Sir Edward Cole rode in the circuit with a prodigious fan, which had a handle set with rubies to be corrected his daughters.

A PREHISTORIC FORTRESS.

Visiting the Ancient Homes of the Cliff-Dwellers.

Behind the gray debris of the cliff gapes the low-arched mouth of a broad cave. It is a weird place to enter, under tons that threaten to fall on a breath; but there have been others here before us. As the eye grows wonted to the gloom, it makes out a flat surface beyond. Then forty feet back from the mouth, a rear wall stretches across the cave; and about in its center is one of the tiny doors that were characteristic of the South-west when a doorway big enough to let in a whole Apache at a time was unsafe. So the fort-house balanced on the cliff-rim between two abysses and the houses nestled in crannies of the bald precipice were not enough—they must build far in the very caves! That wall shuts off a large, low, dark room. Beyond is another, darker and safer, and so on. To our left is another wall in the front apartment, and a door in it; and in that wall is a little token from the dead past. When I went there for St. Nicholas in June, 1891, my flash-light failed, and I left a day entrance to explore during the hour it would take the lens to study out part of the cave in that gloom. And suddenly there announced itself some thing in my eyes; for on the flinty mortar of that strange wall was a print made when the mortar was fresh adobe mud, at least five hundred years ago, maybe several thousands—the perfect imprint of a baby's chubby hand. And of that child, whose mud autograph has lasted perhaps as long as Cæsar's fame, who may have wrought as deep impression on the history of his race as Cæsar on the world's, we know no more than that careless hand-print, nor ever shall know.

This left-hand cave is particularly full of interest, says a writer in St. Nicholas, and is probably the best remaining example of this class of home-making by the so-called "Cliff-dwellers." With its many chambers, ledges and branches, it is hundreds of feet in length; and its rooms formed by cross-walls of masonry, extend far into the heart of the hill, seemingly under the fort-house. It seems to have been used for the last retreat of the people in case the fortress and the cliff-houses were captured by an enemy. It was well stored with corn, whose mummied cobs are still there; and—equally important—it had abundant water. The well seems to have no outlet—the only token of one visible from within being a little rift in the water-moses just in front of the caves. But in fact there is a mysterious channel far down under the cliff, whence the waters of the lake escape to the creek. In exploring the main cave one hears the sound of running water, and presently finds a place where one may dip a drink through a hole in the limestone floor of a subterranean room. The course of this lonely little brook can be traced for some distance through the cave, below the lower floor it runs. And there in the rooms are lava hand-mills and battered stone hammers, and other relics of the forgotten people.

Saved His Child's Life.

J. N. Dilferbaugh, York, Neb., says: "I feel either day I came home and found my little boy down with cholera morbus, my wife scared, not knowing what to do. I went straightway and got a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and gave it according to directions. You never saw such a change in a child. His limbs and body were cold. I rubbed his limbs and body with my hands, and after I had given him the medicine he went to sleep. When I told my wife says, "from a death-bed he was up playing in three hours." It saved me a doctor bill of about three dollars, and what is better, it saved the child. I can recommend it with a clear conscience." For sale by druggists.

A Queer Legend of Tamed Men.

When a native Hollander wants to show his hatred for an Englishman he simply refers to him as a "steert aan"—in other words, "One man with a tail." The legend says that Thomas a Becket cursed the Kentishmen who spitefully cut off the tail of his horse, and to them was added the animal through that country, and that the entire generation of Kent which followed wore tails like those of horses. John Bale, Edward VI.'s Bishop of Ossory, mentions the legend, but gives some variations in the cause of the ignoble punishment. He says John Capgrave and Alexander of Faudy sayoih that "for cutsynge lyahs tayles at St. Augustine, Borsesbyro men had tayles ever after that." But Polydorus applies it to Benithsmen at Strond by Rochaster, "for cutting off Thomas Becket's horse's tayle." One account says that only those living in Kent at the time of the curse were subjected with large dangling taylas like brutes; their posterity being not so afected."

If the boundaries of Custer county, Monta., have not been recently changed they still surround 26,000 square miles of territory, making that one county larger than the five States of Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Delaware and Rhode Island.
